Harry E. Fitzwater, Deputy Director
Administration
Central Intelligence Agency
Washington, DC 20505

Dear Mr. Fitzwater:

Are you a telephone intensive person?

Have you ever missed a call from a very important person because your line was busy?

When in a meeting or on the phone, how does your assistant or your secretary get in touch with you? Do they have to knock on the door and interrupt someone speaking or buzz your phone and you have to put the party on hold? Well, now there is a more sophisticated and discreet way of reaching you. You can answer all contacts quickly, and quietly, and the persons with whom you are conversing never realize they have been interrupted. This product is newly patented and available for demonstrations and trials. In addition to the aforementioned uses, it also cuts costs on returning long distance phone calls, telephone tag locally, stores telephone messages (eliminating small pieces of paper which fly away and get lost) and stores appointments for later prompting.

Our current clients include the Department of Interior, Department of State, U.S. Air Force, U.S. Senate and numerous private sector people.

If you feel that this product can save you money and time (which equals money), please call me at your earliest convenience for an appointment.

Thank you for your attention and I hope that I will hear from you soon.

Very truly yours,

Theodora P. Nicholas
